

Propriety as Public Policy

A way forward for Rural Canada

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from a deep blue at the top to a vibrant orange and red near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky.

We should always try to apply to our personal lives and our economy the same rules that govern evolution:

Beauty

Simplicity

Fairness

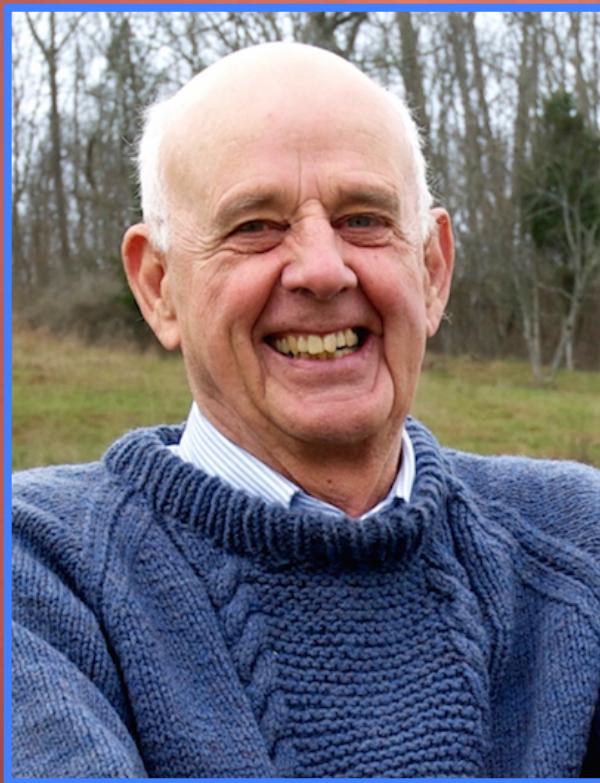

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from deep blue at the top to intense orange and red near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky.

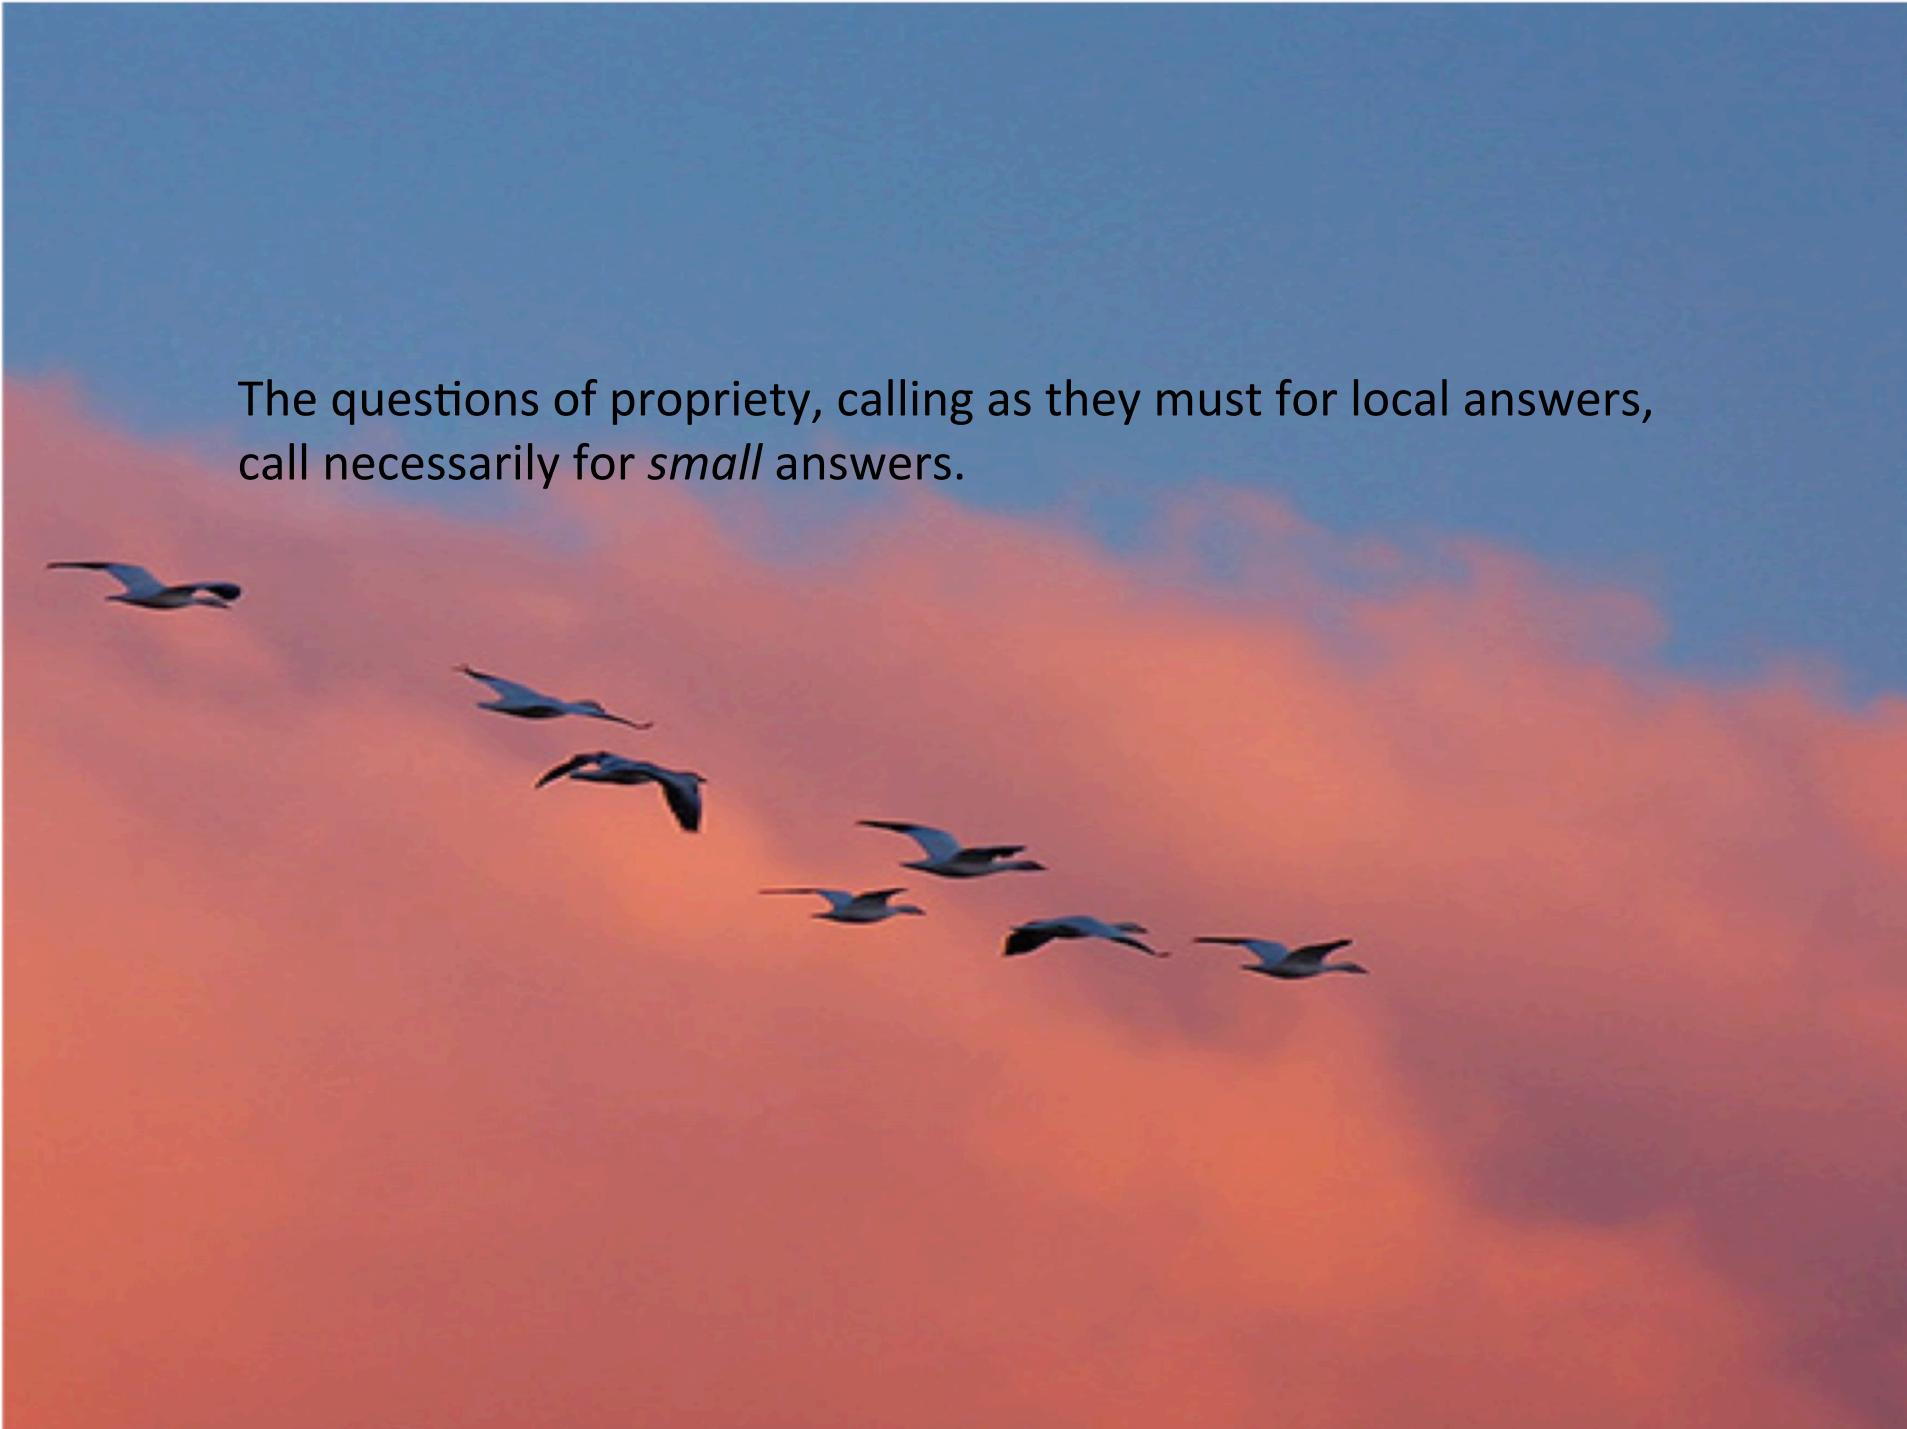

What is important is inclusive and reflective public conversations that lead to public policies that are:

...first about values and then about choices

...first about means and then about ends

... first about purpose and then about profits

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from deep blue at the top to intense orange and red clouds near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky, their dark wings and bodies forming a distinct V. There are approximately seven birds visible in the formation.

The questions of propriety, calling as they must for local answers, call necessarily for small answers.

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from deep blue at the top to intense orange and red near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky.

Any intelligent fool can make things bigger, more complex, and more violent.
It takes a touch of genius – and a lot of courage – to move in the opposite direction. E.F. Schumacher

-courage in business-

-courage in municipal government-

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in formation against a dramatic sunset sky. The birds are silhouetted against the bright orange and yellow clouds. The sky transitions from a deep blue at the top to a vibrant orange and red near the horizon. The birds are arranged in a loose V-shape, moving from left to right across the frame.

-courage in business-

-courage in municipal government-

Municipal government must draft and implement economic development strategies, strategic plans, municipal planning strategies, and land use by-laws that encourage and enable local community self-sufficiency in - energy production and distribution

food production and distribution

education

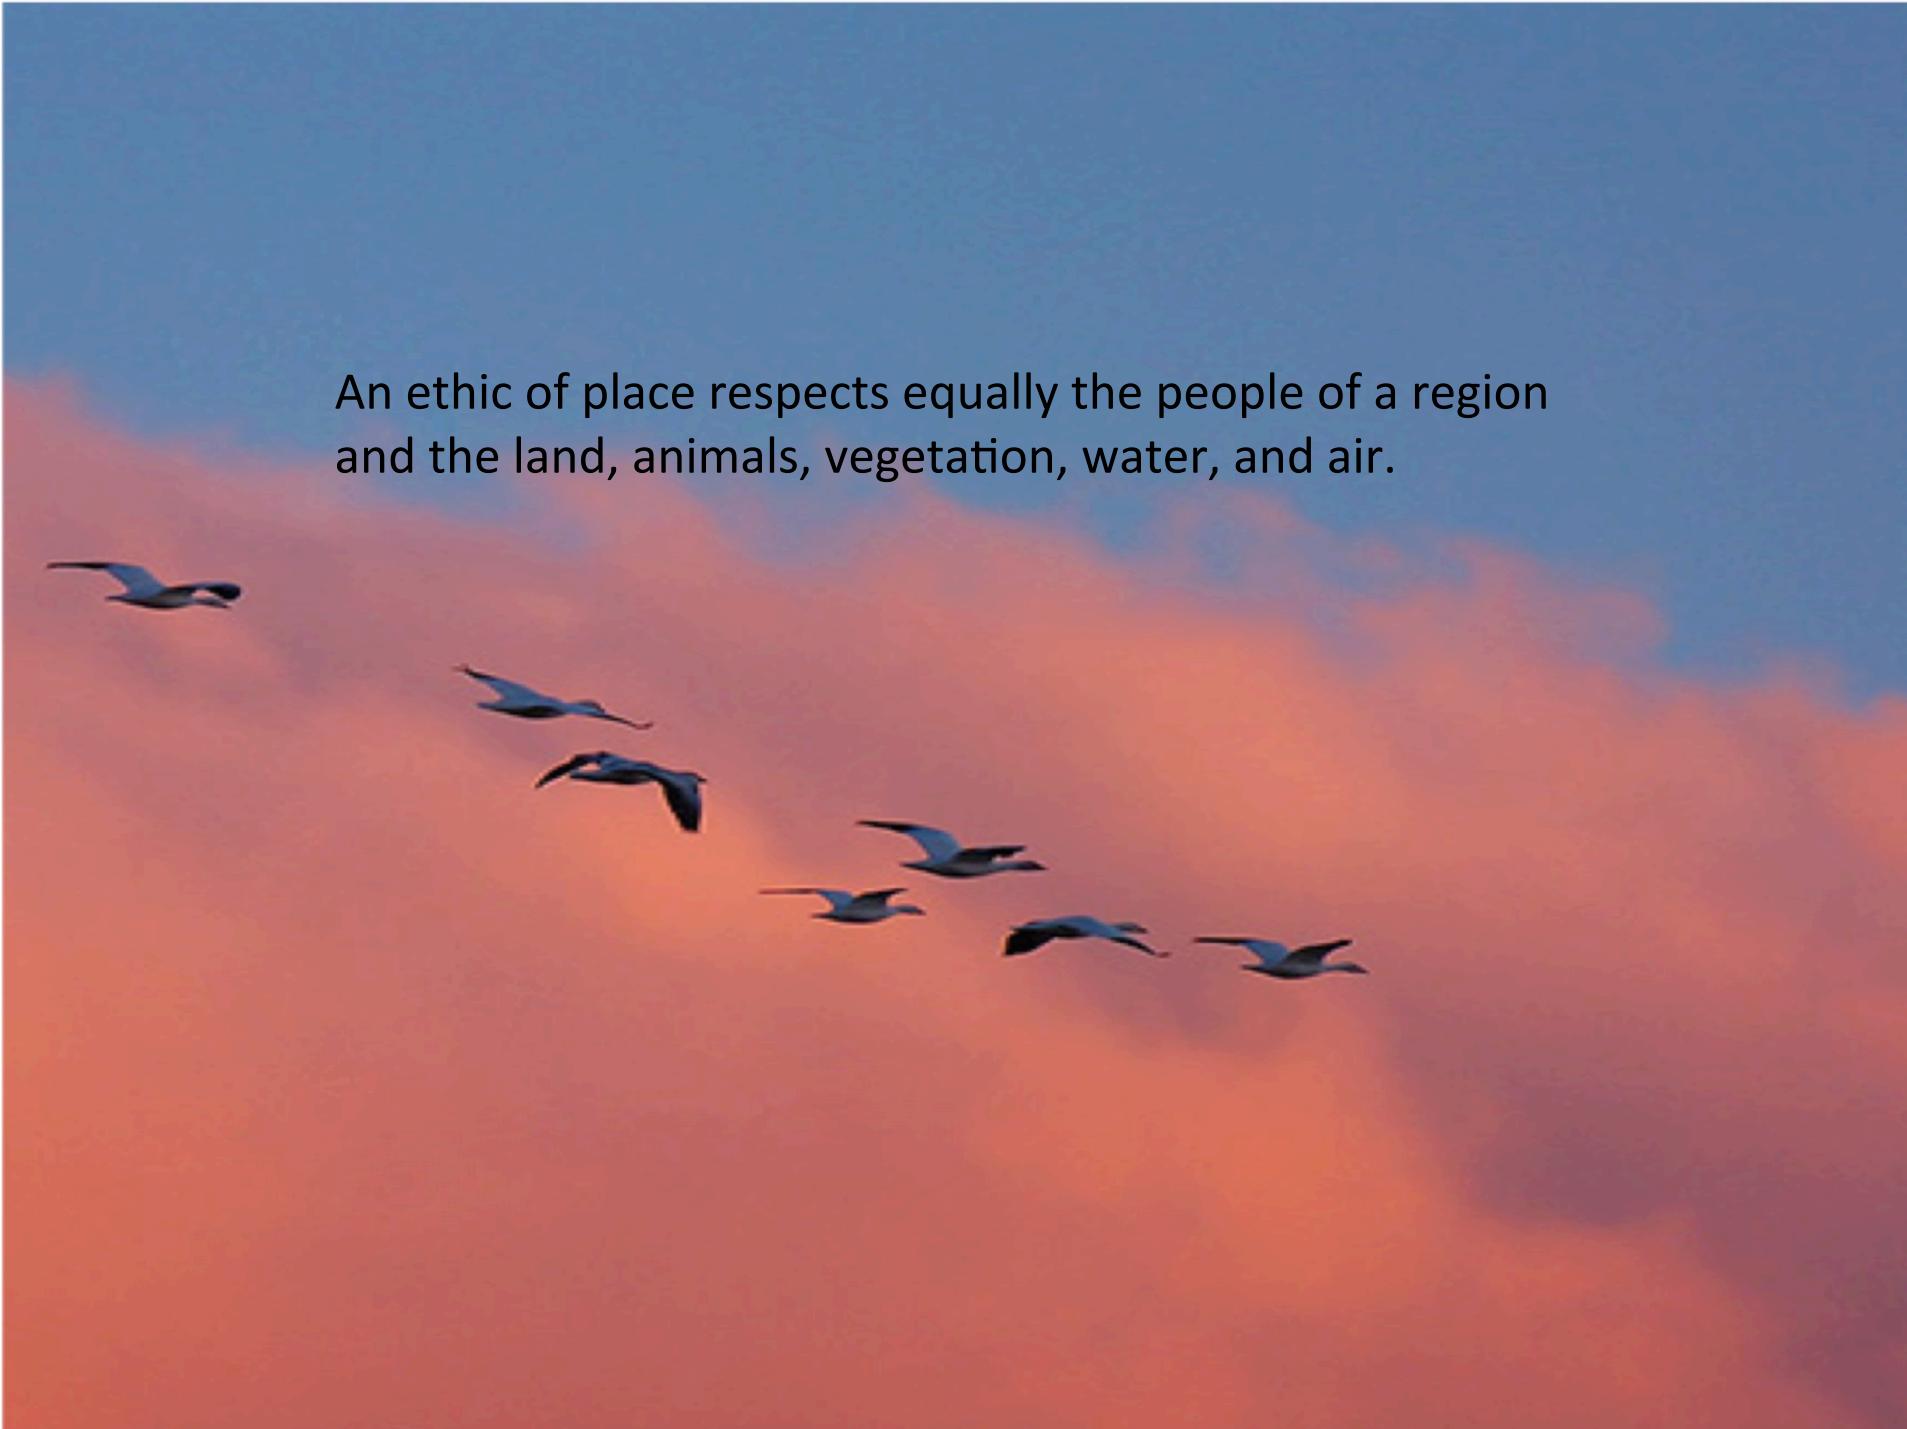

finance

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely seagulls, flying in a V-formation against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from deep blue at the top to intense orange and red clouds near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky.

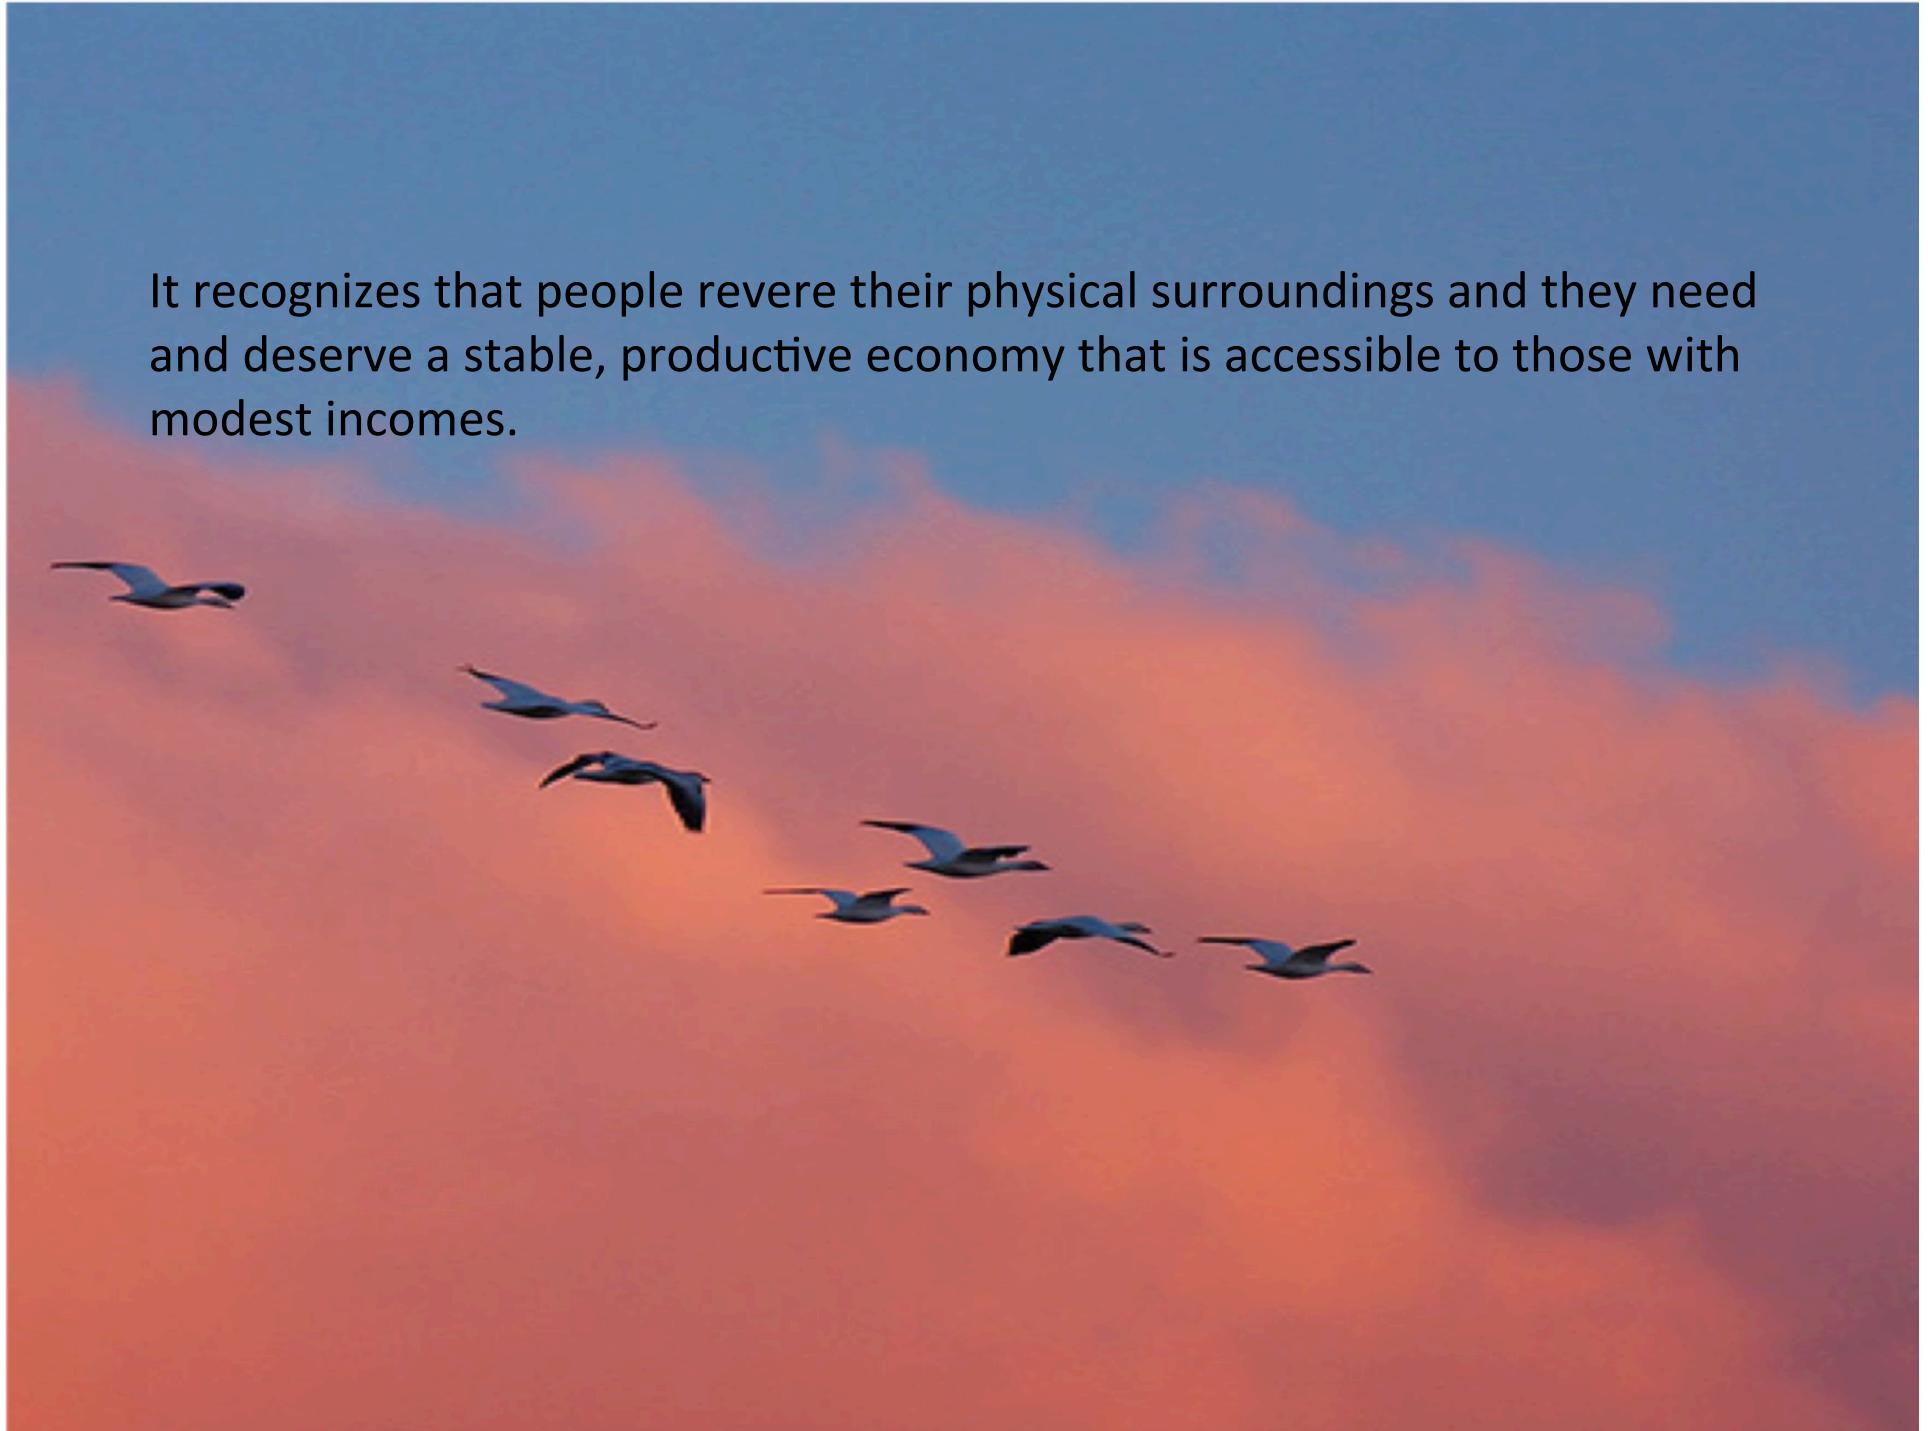

And more importantly, municipalities must adopt a code of conduct that governs how citizens, politicians and businesses behave.

An Ethic of Place

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from a deep blue at the top to a vibrant orange and red near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky, their dark wings and bodies forming a distinct V-shape.

An ethic of place respects equally the people of a region and the land, animals, vegetation, water, and air.

It recognizes that people revere their physical surroundings and they need and deserve a stable, productive economy that is accessible to those with modest incomes.

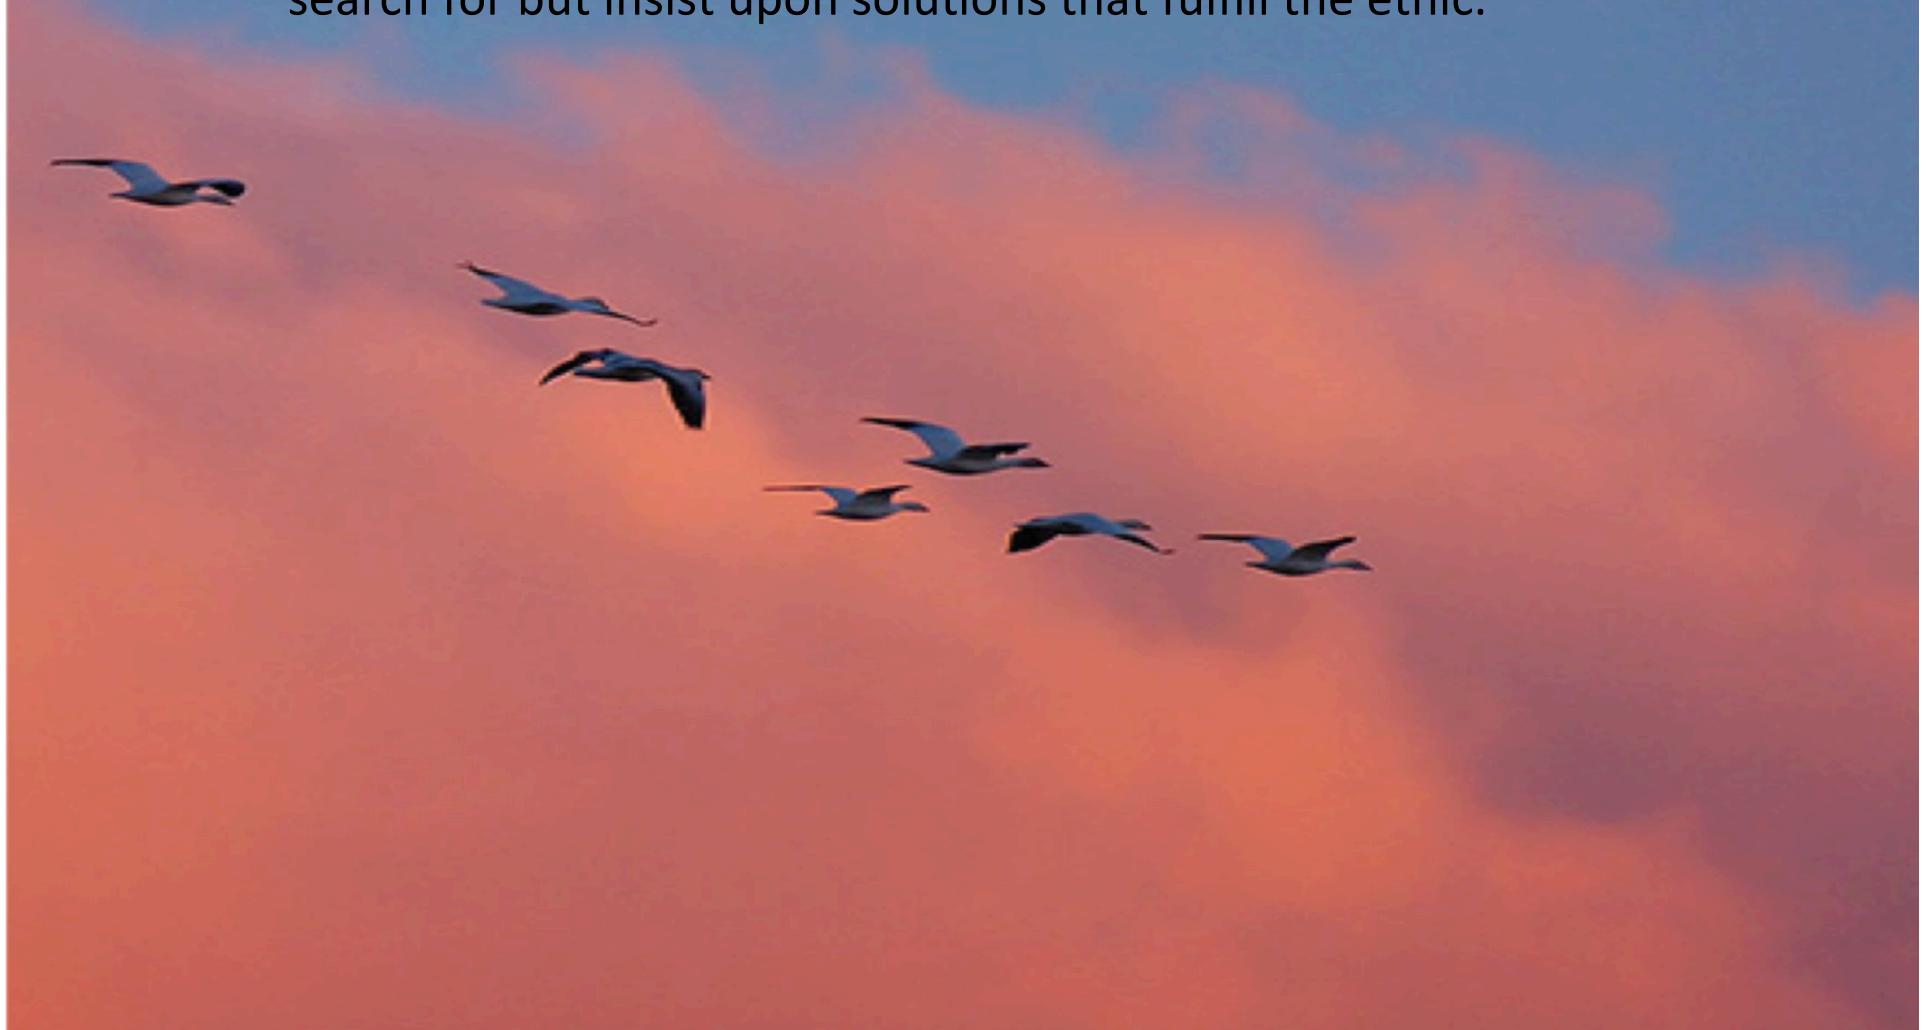

An ethic of place ought to be a shared community value and ought to manifest itself in a determination to treat the environment and its people as equals,

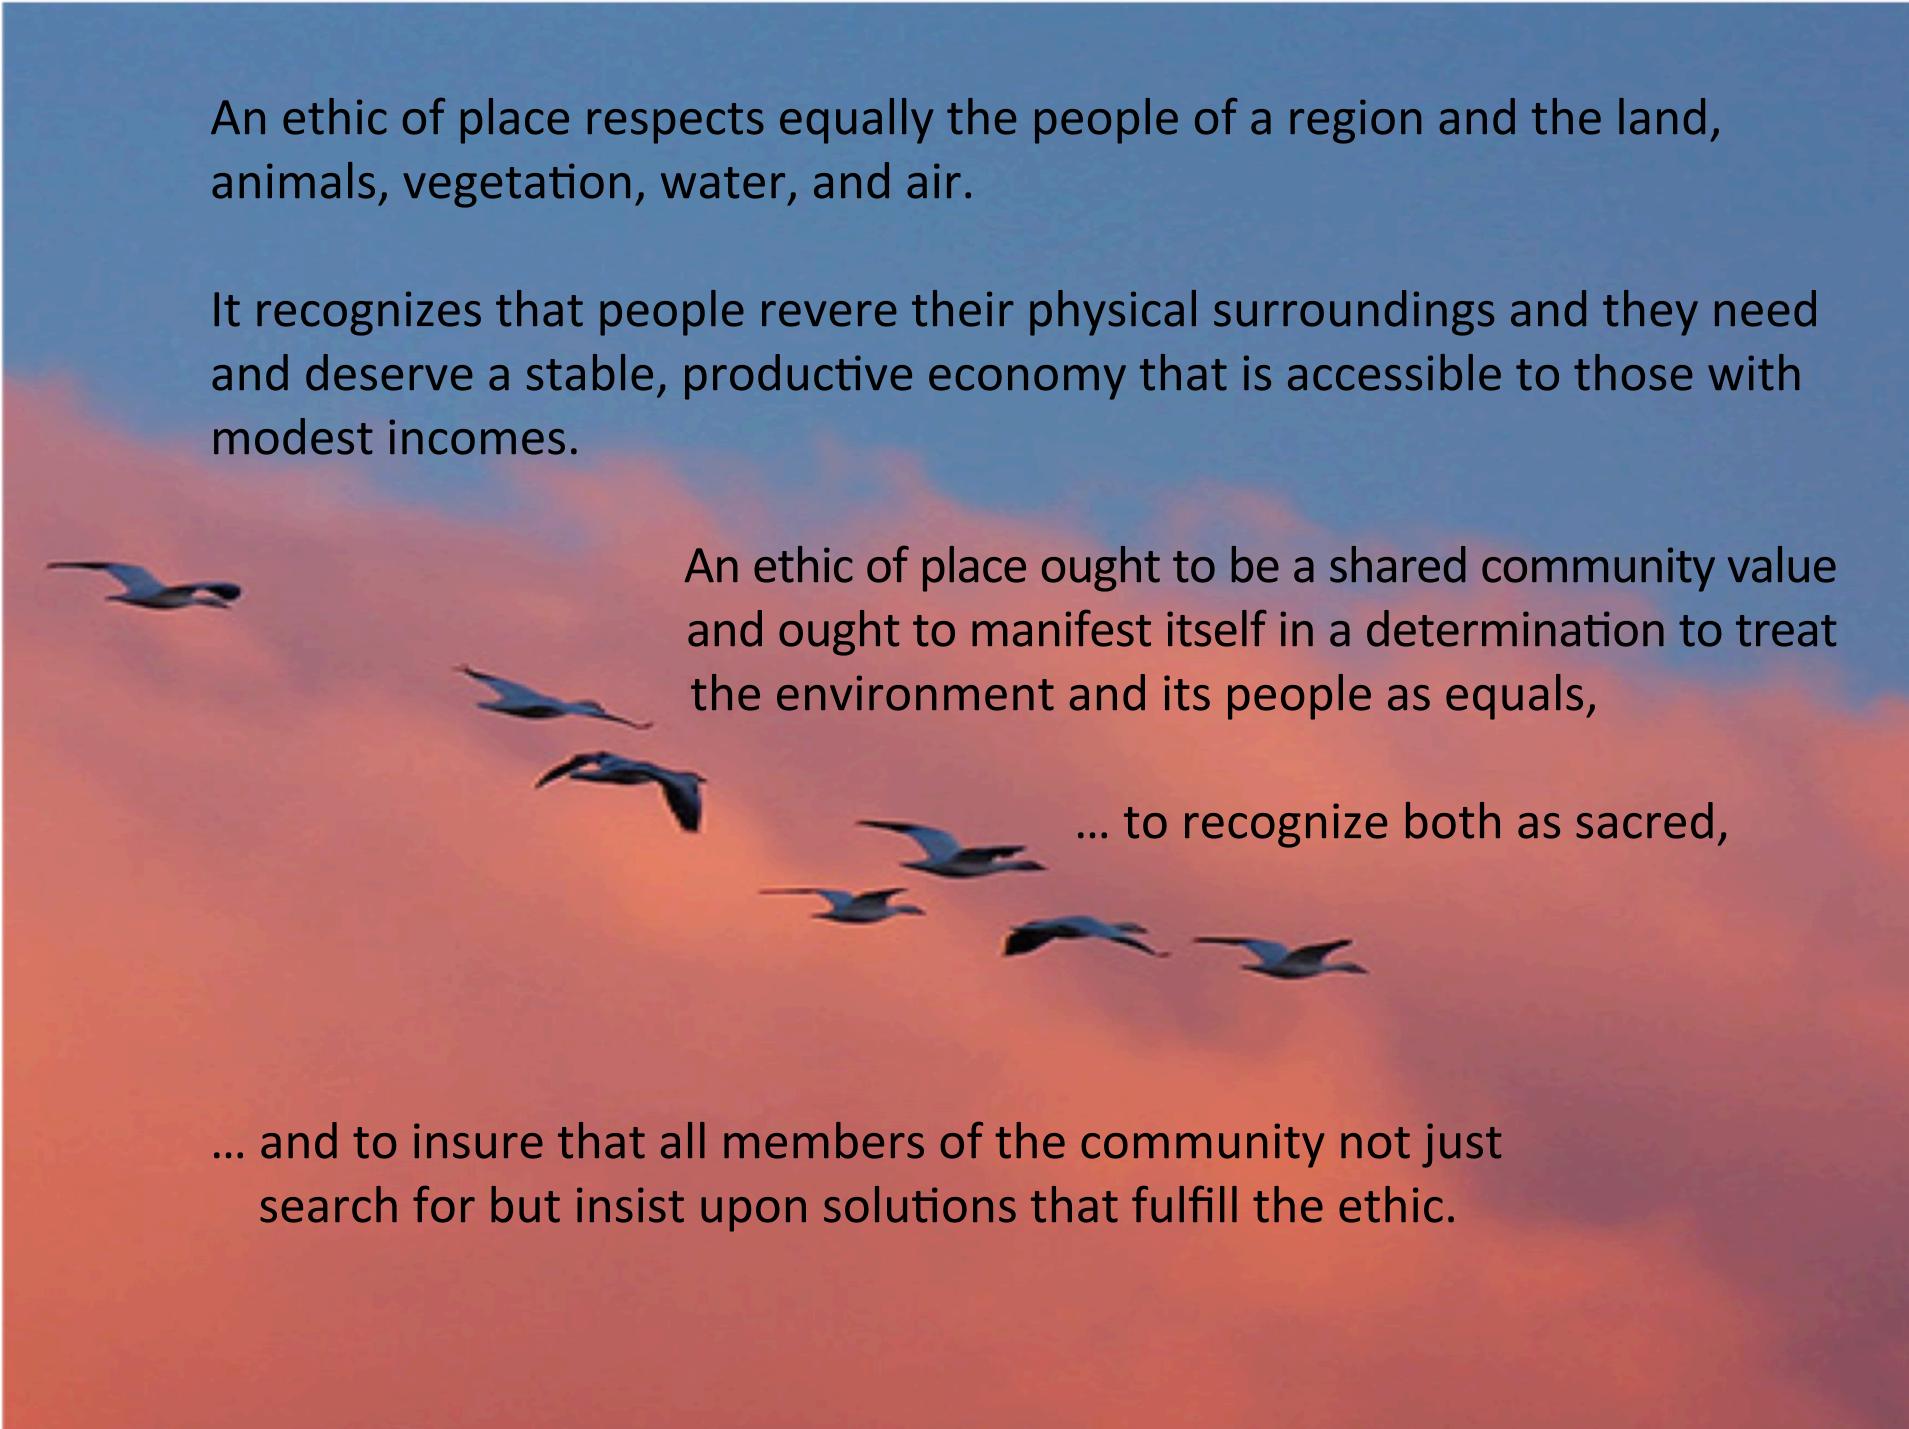

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely geese, flying in a V-shape against a dramatic sunset sky. The sky transitions from a deep blue at the top to a vibrant orange and red near the horizon. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky, their dark forms creating a strong visual contrast.

... to recognize both as sacred

... and to insure that all members of the community not just search for but insist upon solutions that fulfill the ethic.

A photograph of a flock of birds, likely seagulls, flying in a sky transitioning from blue at the top to a warm orange and red at the bottom, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The birds are silhouetted against the bright sky.

An ethic of place respects equally the people of a region and the land, animals, vegetation, water, and air.

It recognizes that people revere their physical surroundings and they need and deserve a stable, productive economy that is accessible to those with modest incomes.

An ethic of place ought to be a shared community value and ought to manifest itself in a determination to treat the environment and its people as equals,

... to recognize both as sacred,

... and to insure that all members of the community not just search for but insist upon solutions that fulfill the ethic.

